
Gay close encounter

Posted by matthewd - 2008/02/27 03:24

I just had the gayest close encounter yet. haha.

I was on the tube (underground train in London) coming back from some place sat like across this hot guy. Was kind of checking him out not trying to be obvious.

He get's off and I look back at through the window to see where is he, and then I notice it's my stop so I run off the train. We continue and we happen to get on the same exact exchange train, in the same exact part and he sits one seat next to me (someone in the way). Haha so there's some awkward glances from me and him. And I get up to get off the train and he also happens to get off at the same exact stop.

Now I expected him to get out of the station and then go somewhere but he actually ended up going across the road and carrying on all the way till I got home where he turned when I was coming up to my place. I thought it was kind of funny, I guess he went off to go graffiti a legal wall near my area. But I wish I had said something as he was hot... haha.

So I was wondering what you guys would have done and how would you tell if the other random dude is gay or not. :P

=====

Re:Gay close encounter

Posted by BravoLima - 2008/02/28 03:21

Huh? That's not a gay close encounter. That's just a coincidence, I think you've got a pretty overactive imagination.

If I had no way to strike up conversation with the guy, then I would've submitted to the way things are and watched him walk away, relying in the statistical fact that he's most likely straight, that I have no reason to think otherwise, and less reason to get my hopes up.

Awkward glances? Probably thinking, 'Ok, why's this guy looking at me all the time?'

=====

Re:Gay close encounter

Posted by matthewd - 2008/02/28 13:38

haha. I guess it was my overactive imagination. Kind of weird that he ended up going in the same direction till I got home :-p

=====